Important: Stop doing that in that facility. According to our observations during inspection, your facility generates spent aerosol cans, most of them are cleaners with CFC's (D001, F-list). For that reason, technically, doing the puncturing without a proper system you are releasing hazardous wastes (propellant) to the environment. Your facility has two options to make a proper waste determination (under 40 CFR 262.11)

1. Start collecting the spent aerosol cans and dispose properly as HW with Safety Kleen or other company of your preference. OR
2. Collect the spent aerosol cans and puncture them with a proper puncture-unit system (no screwdriver or other non-approved method). See attachment for example.

When the facility made a determination, please send me your response.

Important: Stop doing that in that facility. According to our observations during inspection, your facility generates spent aerosol cans, most of them are cleaners with CFC's (D001, F-list). For that reason, technically, doing the puncturing without a proper system you are releasing hazardous wastes (propellant) to the environment. Your facility has two options to make a proper waste determination (under 40 CFR 262.11)

1. Start collecting the spent aerosol cans and dispose properly as HW with Safety Kleen or other company of your preference. OR
2. Collect the spent aerosol cans and puncture them with a proper puncture-unit system (no screwdriver or other non-approved method). See attachment for example.

When the facility made a determination, please send me your response.
