FYI International Paper had an 18,000 gallon tank of 93% sulfuric acid release into secondary containment and possibly outside of that with an estimated total of 9,000 gallons. I am not sure if this is a registered mineral acid tank or not but I wanted to make sure y'all were aware.

Thank you,

I spoke with Laurie McLain with IP this morning. The official investigation is ongoing and pumping is still taking place. The tank involved was an 18,000 gallon sulfuric acid tank that was 50% full at the time that a valve failed. The release is believed to be kept in secondary containment but there is a possibility that some seepage allowed product to escape. At the time of our phone conversation this morning there was no sign of the sulfuric acid reaching soil or IP's waste water treatment plant. As their investigation continues we will be provided updates. The potential spill into containment is 9,000 gallons.

Thank you,

Hey Chad can you let us know the amount of the release when you find out? Also I know you stated that "The spill has been contained" but did any of the sulfuric acid release outside of containment at any time?

Thanks,
John

Update,

Laurie McClain with IP stated that a contractor is on scene and is providing assistance with this incident. The spill amount is still unknown at this time and calculations will have to be performed before an estimated amount can be determined. The spill area is contained and they are pumping from their sump (impacted area) into totes.
